Autumn Internationals: Jac Issues Warning Over Ospreys' Future

Autumn Internationals: Jac Morgan has cautioned the Welsh Rugby Union (WRU) that he will depart professional domestic rugby in Wales should the Ospreys disband. The Ospreys revealed that the Wales and British & Irish Lions back-row forward has warned the governing body, which is currently considering cutting down the number of professional franchises.

Supporters of the Ospreys were told of Morgan's intentions at a recent fans' forum to discuss the highly divisive proposals, which might lead to two from Ospreys, Scarlets, Dragons, or Cardiff being axed. Morgan, the only Welsh player who featured in the Lions tour of Australia this summer, has become the most prominent figure to threaten departure by stating he wishes to represent the Ospreys only.

The 25-year-old, who was crowned Wales' men's player of the year last week, is out of contract at the end of the 2025–26 campaign. Morgan moved to the Ospreys from the Scarlets in 2021. As the autumn internationals highlight Welsh rugby on the worldwide platform, the WRU has argued that reducing the number of regions to two is the drastic reform needed to uplift the state of domestic rugby in Wales.

Nonetheless, alternative revenue models are under review as the union consults athletes, supporters, and stakeholders. This review concludes on 30 September. The Welsh Rugby Players Association (WRPA) has told the WRU that its recommendations for the elite league would force leading talent to depart Wales.

Autumn Internationals 2025: Morgan and Lake Form Wales' Leadership Core

Morgan remains the most influential Welsh star at present and a strong contender, alongside Dewi Lake, to captain Wales during November's Autumn Internationals 2025. That role carries immense honor and responsibility amid domestic turbulence. A conclusive decision on whether two teams will vanish will be announced by the end of October when the WRU declares its final resolution.

Head coach Mark Jones emphasized Morgan's sincerity and devotion to the Ospreys. Jac has remarkable integrity, said Jones. He hasn't officially told me about leaving Ospreys, but if he has, it shows how deeply he values the Ospreys and his teammates. He deserves acknowledgment if he's said it. Welsh rugby and the Ospreys would be thrilled to have Jac on this side for many years.

Jones confirmed Morgan will once more lead the side this season, with Dewi Lake staying as his vice-captain for Ospreys, a leadership duo expected to shine during the approaching autumn contests. Those two have done it before, Jones remarked. They foil one another very well. Jones added that the squad has a fantastic and seasoned leadership core, vital for the looming Wales vs New Zealand encounter.

We’re lucky to have two such individuals with strong backing behind them, he said. Morgan, however, will miss the opening fixture against the Bulls in Pretoria on Saturday as he continues pre-season preparations following his Lions appearances. Lake will captain during his absence, with Morgan expected to join the team before their second clash against the Stormers in Cape Town on 3 October.

Wales Vs New Zealand: Morgan Crowned Wales Player of the Year Again

Morgan has also been awarded Wales’ men’s player of the year for the second time by the Welsh Rugby Writers’ Association (WRWA). Kate Williams claimed the women’s award. Morgan secured the honor after an outstanding year, standing out in an otherwise disappointing 2024–25 campaign for the national team, and now looks set to play a pivotal role in the upcoming Wales Vs New Zealand clash.

His superb performances, particularly in the autumn series, earned him selection with the Lions for the Australian tour, where he appeared off the bench in both the second and third Tests. A controversial ruck clear-out in Melbourne, deemed flawless by a former World Cup final referee, elevated expectations ahead of the Wales vs Argentina clash.

The play showcased the decisive influence Morgan brings to Wales in the Autumn Internationals. His intervention created the winning score for Hugo Keenan as the tourists clinched the series early. Morgan celebrated as teammates ended an 18-Test losing streak while Down Under. It was a tough year with how the games unfolded, but watching the lads win in Japan was really special, said Morgan, who also secured the WRWA accolade in 2023.

It’s been challenging, but we’ve worked tirelessly as a unit and stayed united. Morgan remains a vital figure for club and country, hoping to benefit from working alongside stars such as Maro Itoje. Other influential players like Tahj Berne, Jack Conan, and Tom Curry are anticipated to leave their mark in the upcoming internationals.
